WORKING WOMEN, ATTENTION

For Those of You Who Wish to Go to School Here Is a Fine Chance. There is at 230 East Houston street a free evening school for the great lower east side, whose Principal, Miss Mary J. Pierson, will be very glad to receive as pupils all the working girls and workingwomen whom her school-rooms can accommodate. The only requisites are that candidates for admission shall be at least sixteen years old and work ers during the day. It makes no difference whether they speak the English language or not. There are teachers in the school who instruct foreigners in the language of this country. Special classes are formed for each nationality, and after a sufficient acquaintance with English has been attained, instruction is then given in other branches.

Miss Pierson has been in charge of the East Houston Street Night School for Girls and Women for several years. She has an intimate knowledge of life upon the east side, and a large-hearted sympathy with girls and women who must work for themselves or their parents.

The East Houston Street Evening School for Girls and Women for several years instruction in the common branches, in history, English and American literature, bookkeeping—both single and double entry—drawing and shorthand. There will be plenty of room this year for pupils, but at the same time it is desirable that those intending to make use of their nights should call at the school and register at once. The Principal will be at the school this ovening, and every other evening this week except Saturday, from 0.30 until 0 octock. If you have any idea at all of coing to night-school this Winter, and are ever sixteen years of age, go and talk with Miss Pierson about E.
